Not expected to be endorsed

UConn's budget to go before Senate

By Matt Cookson
Daily Campus Staff

An appropriations committee passed a state budget yesterday allocating approximately $110 million for UConn's 1986-87 budget, but the budget is not expected to be endorsed by the Republican Senate, said Rep. Jon Pelto (D-Mansfield).

The committee, made up of members of both the House and Senate, has passed the budget proposal to the state Senate who will vote on it next week. The budget calls for a nine percent increase over last year.

"I think the mood there, especially with the senate representatives, is exceptionally irresponsible."

-Rep. Mike Helfgott (D-Willington)

"In past years, the budget out of appropriations has been the same budget that passed the House and Senate," said Rep. Mike Helfgott (D-Willington), who has been on the committee for six years. This year Helfgott expects heavy cuts in state services by the Senate.

Delta Chi cancels wrestling bout

By Dean Orser
Daily Campus Staff

With all the impact of a brutal body slam, a lack of student interest has forced Delta Chi International Fraternity to cancel its professional wrestling bout.

"We did our damndest to stimulate the community," said vice president, Aaron Spicker. "It wasn't beneficial to do this."

Delta Chi planned to sponsor the event in conjunction with the Eastern Wrestling Alliance, but according to Frat president, Kevin Coyne, "decided it wasn't worthwhile for either parties."

The event was to be held on Saturday in the field house. Coyne said that ticket-holders can get refunds by going to the house or by going to the Field House at 7 p.m. tomorrow night.

"At first, response was big," Coyne said, "but we can't wait until the last minute with this much money."

According to Spicker, the fraternity had "covered all the areas" in an effort to stimulate interest in the event.

"We put tickets in Storrs, Willimantic, Enfield, Suffield, Tolland- we put tickets in Huskies, Nassifs, the Student Union, the library, and we still weren't getting any response from the public," he said.

Coyne and Spicker acknowledge that because James Mapes's performance is Saturday, ticket sales may have been affected, and said they didn't think Delta Chi would attempt to re-schedule the event for a future date.

The wrestling match was planned as a fundraiser according to Coyne. "Our budget is pretty low right now," he said. See page 4

Terrorism: Is there a way to stop it?

PARIS (AP) - As the jetliner eased into its descent for Beirut airport, the long arm of the United States was waiting.

Aboard the plane sat Hussein Athat, suspect in an alleged plot to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Rome. Authorities in Switzerland had just freed him in exchange for a Swiss diplomat kidnapped in Beirut.

On the ground, readying a trap, waited a band of Lebanese gunmen dispatched by the Americans to abduct the 21-year-old Shiite Moslem. If U.S. and Italian investigators could interrogate Athat, he might provide information crucial to the case against seven alleged collaborators in the abortive Rome plot.

But as the young Lebanese stepped from the airliner, the plan fell apart. Heavily armed Shiites quickly closed in on their comrade, and he was whisked off to Beirut.

The January 1985 kidnap attempt, recounted by a U.S. official deeply involved in the plan, helps illustrate the two-track approach - legal and "extra-legal" - governments are taking to deal with international terrorism.

In interviews in Europe, the Middle East and the United States, security officials, diplomats and others said the anti-terrorist fight requires closer international cooperation through treaties, intelligence-gathering and extradition agreements.

"There's a whole underworld at work out there," said a U.S. diplomat in the Middle East. "Israelies are killed here, Palestinian boats are sunk there. You don't always know what's going on. But it's important."

The world community also has patched together a half-dozen anti-terrorism treaties since 1969, calling on governments to prosecute or extradite aircraft hijackers, aircraft saboteurs and hostage-takers.

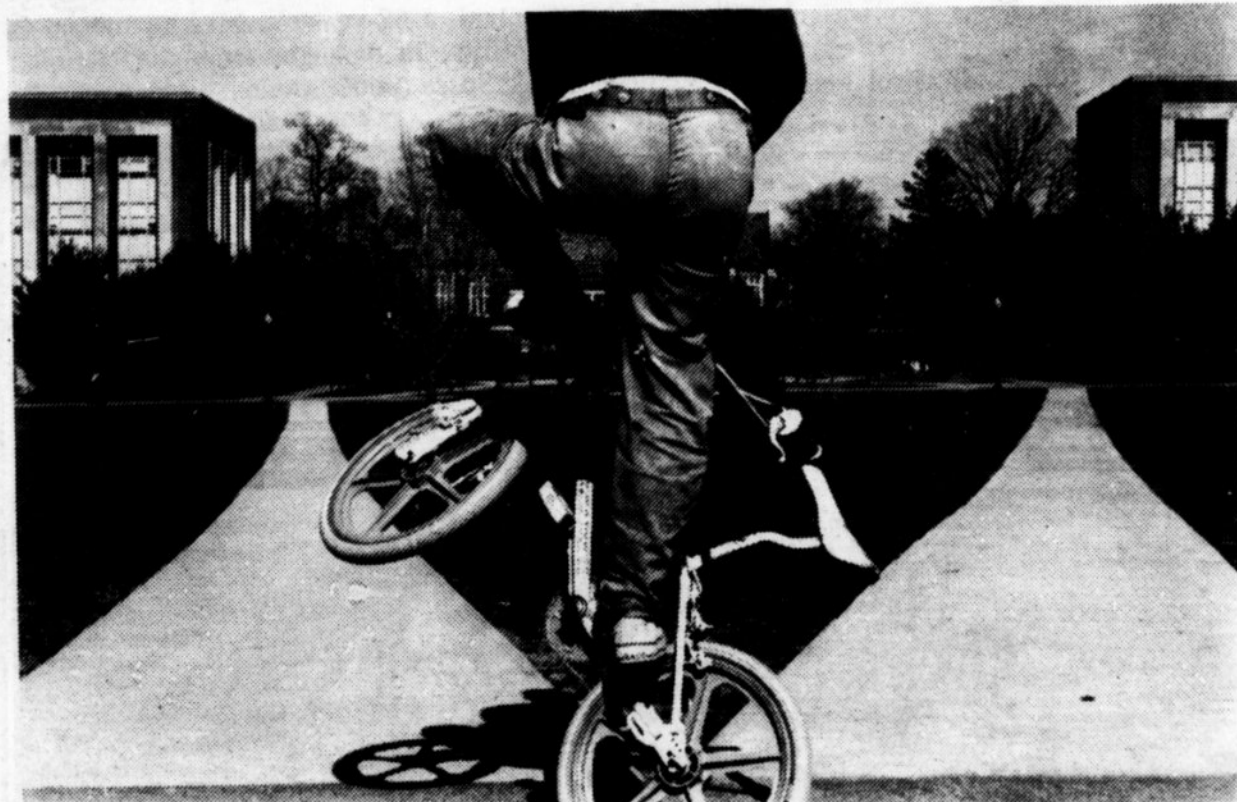

But terrorists slip easily through this net of international agreements. Such countries as Iran and Lebanon, favorite destinations of skyjackers, either reject the treaties or ignore their obligations under the pacts.

Frustrated with the multilateral approach, the United States Senate has approved legislation making it a U.S. crime, punishable by death, for terrorists to kill Americans abroad.

Some spectacular "extra-legal" methods have already been used, such as the U.S. interception of an Egyptian airliner carrying the Achille Lauro "seajacking" suspects last October.

Every Christmastime in London, police are deluged with calls from nervous shoppers asking whether Irish Republican Army bombers will target department stores again.

"There's always that fear of terrorism," said Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist chief George Churchill-Coleman. "That's the worst thing, the fear."

STATE UTC alleges bribery

NEW HAVEN (AP)—United Technologies Corp. filed a federal court suit this week that accuses a competition in the helicopter parts business of bribing a UTC employee for information allegedly used to help win government contracts.

A federal judge has issued a temporary restraining order against the competitor, New Haven-based Airborne Apparel Inc., instructing it to stop the alleged bribing and to maintain any UTC materials it may have until further court hearings.

UTC alleges in the complaint that Airborne Apparel, Inc., of New Haven, and four of its employees or officers were involved in paying an employee of UTC's Sikorsky Aircraft Division for stolen blueprints and shop drawings between 1984 and February of this year.

Sikorsky, based in Stratford, is a manufacturer of helicopters and provides helicopters to the military.

As a result of the allegedly illegally obtained information, UTC said Airborne was able to win government contracts for helicopter parts. Sikorsky was competing for those contracts, the complaint said.

The Hartford lawyer representing UTC, John B. Nolan, Thursday said he would not reveal the amount of the bribes to the Sikorsky employee, identified in the complaints as Salvatore M. Schippani.

The suit said that Schippani worked as an interior upholstery leadman at Sikorsky's South Avenue facility in Bridgeport from July 1952 until March and had access to "all drawings and blueprints prepared by Sikorsky engineers to be used in the manufacture of helicopters and helicopter parts."

Nolan said he didn't know how much business Sikorsky thinks it lost to Airborne as a result of the actions described in the suit. He also said he didn't know what Airborne made.

A man who would only identify himself as an employee of Airborne said during a telephone interview that the company is involved in sewing.

Jurors shown place of jail break attempt

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP)—Jurors in the trial of former fugitive lawyer Stephen Bingham toured San Quentin prison Thursday to see where six people died in a bloody 1971 escape attempt.

Bingham, 44, is accused of slipping a pistol to inmate-author George Jackson, who authorities say started the violence nearly 15 years ago. Bingham disappeared the day of the escape attempt and remained a fugitive until he surrendered in 1984.

Marin County District Attorney Terry Boren said the jurors were shown the front gate of the prison and a metal detector where visitors are checked for contraband.

Boren contends the 9mm automatic pistol was brought into the prison inside a tape recorder carried by Vanita Anderson, a legal investigator working with Jackson. He says Bingham took the tape recorder into an interview room where he met with Jackson and that Jackson had the gun when he was returned to his cell.

Former San Quentin guard Bernard C. Betts operated the metal detector Aug. 21, 1971, the day authorities say the pistol was smuggled inside. He testified Tuesday that he thoroughly checked the tape recorder, including its battery compartment, before allowing it inside the prison walls.

Ms. Anderson never cooperated with investigators and Boren has said he won't call her to testify. Bingham's lawyers won't comment on their plans.

Boren said the jurors also toured the Adjustment Center, the cellblock where three guards and two inmate trustees were killed. In 1971, that area housed the visiting rooms, and the plaza where Jackson was gunned down as he sprinted toward an outside wall.

Reporters were not allowed on the tour, which included Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire and lawyers for both sides.

MIA's flown to Hawaii

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) - Twenty-one caskets containing what are believed to be the remains of American soldiers missing in the Vietnam War were loaded into a U.S. cargo plane Thursday and flown to Hawaii.

Uniformed U.S. soldiers saluted as the aluminum caskets were placed in a C-141 plane at Hanoi's Noi Bai International Airport. A U.S. flag, folded into a triangle, lay atop each casket.

The Vietnamese also handed over six identification tags and a small stack of identification cards of U.S. soldiers missing in action, officials said. Most of the tags and cards belonged with the 21 sets of remains.

Hanoi also provided unspecified documents on three other soldiers missing in action.

The United States, in turn, gave back two sets of remains that were part of a group of 24 handed over by the Vietnamese last August. The two sets turned out not to be those of U.S. soldiers missing in action.

It was the fourth exchange since March 1985. If the U.S. Army laboratory in Honolulu identifies the 21 sets as those of U.S. soldiers, it would bring to 56 the total number of Americans who remains have been sent home in the past year.

The U.S. Defense Department has listed 1,792 U.S. soldiers and civilians as missing in Vietnam.

"Out of respect for the deceased, and in recognition of the role they performed for the U.S., we are very concerned about honoring them in proper manner," said Lt. Col. Terry McCann, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command.

McCann had traveled to Hanoi with the U.S. team, consisting of representatives of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Army Central Identification Center.

Nguyen Can, acting head of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's North America desk, told reporters that 15 of the 21 sets of remains had been found in the North, and the others in the South.

Spring Weekend's future depends on students

By Carrie Janush
Campus Correspondent

This could be the last Spring Weekend here at UConn if things don't run smoother this year, according to Frank Discenza, president of Hilltop Council.

The decision was made by the Department of Public Safety and the Vice President of Student Affairs and Services after considering the amount of destruction that took place during last year's Spring Weekend.

According to Discenza, people broke into academic buildings, urinated on buildings, left excessive amounts of broken glass at Towers after the B. Willie Smith concert, and even lit a couch on fire at the concert in the Student Union Mall. In addition, there were numerous complaints about the noise all weekend from residents on Route 44.

Discenza said that moving the concerts into Memorial Stadium should make things more controlled this year. The decision to move was made because the university no longer allows concerts to take place in open areas like the

UConn students to lobby congressmen

On April 17, a group of UConn students will join other students from across the nation for National Student Lobby Day in Washington D.C.

The students will lobby their congressmen on such issues as: resuming negotiations for a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty; lowering current funding for the Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) research; and against funding for first-strike weapons such as the M-X and Trident D-5 missiles.

A proxy drive is underway, and there will be a table in the Student Union from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today. Students interested in attending or signing a proxy can stop by there or contact Bob Gorry, 487-6890; Tom Ude, 487-5224; or Students for Peace.

Student Union Mall. This is due to the raised drinking age.

Discenza said that when the area councils were planning Saturday's concert, they had three alternatives: have no concert at all, move it to a controlled indoor area like the field house or Jorgensen Auditorium, or move it to an outdoor enclosed area. He said that if they had chosen to move it indoors, not everyone would have been able to attend, because of limited capacity. Discenza said the move to Memorial Stadium should provide more control, as well as allow everyone to attend. He added that "this is basically a testing year."

Unless alcohol is kept from the general area of the stadium and people act in an orderly manner, there will be no more Spring Weekend. However, he said, if all goes well Spring Weekends can get bigger and better.

UConn chemists speak at meeting

Fourteen faculty and staff members from UConn's Department of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering will present research papers at the American Chemical Society's 191st National Meeting in New York, April 13-18.

Their papers are among the 3,600 presentations selected to be given at the meeting.

"This meeting is one of the largest held for chemists. It has everything that a big national meeting has, in terms of the number of papers given. It also gives people the chance to meet and talk with others in their field," says Arthur Dimock, assistant head of the chemistry department.

"The number of university people participating this year is a little larger than normal because the location of the meeting is closer to Connecticut," Dimock said.

The meeting is expected to attract more than 10,000 scientists from the U.S. and many foreign countries.

to maintain public services, if not increase them," Helfgott said.

"The Senate wants to cut $70-80 million from the total budget. It would decimate the governor's proposed increases in higher education," Pelto said.

Proponents of the Bigger, Better Deal plan to step up lobbying efforts in order to help pass the budget without heavy educational cuts. "It's been our efforts that brought a 15 percent increase out of the committee," said Geoff Johnson, who developed the Bigger, Better Deal.

"Last year, there was no one spending time on the budget. This year we have had tremendous lobbying support, but nothing is going to escape that axe," Johnson said.

Pelto said that the House and Senate Representative share a different opinion of what the budget should look like, and the House may replace the cuts that the Senate makes. "The battle is not with the House Republicans, it's with the Senate leadership," he said.

Survey shows students opposed to theater conversion

Artist's rendering of proposed malls at and near college theater

By Bill Slocum
Daily Campus Staff

A Daily Campus survey taken yesterday revealed that a majority of UConn students are opposed to the planned conversion of the Trans-Lux College Theater and adjacent property into a combination office complex-mall.

An application submitted to the Mansfield Planning and Zoning Commission by Storrs Associates, if approved, would allow the developers to both convert the theater and build another structure on the property next to it, presently used as parking space.

The complex would occupy a total area of more than 26,000 feet, and will contain mostly store space. Many Mansfield residents have already voiced opposition to the proposal in town meetings, citing it as unnecessary and as causing additional traffic problems.

One student, Tracy Hamilton, said she thought having the movie theater would be better. "It's the only theater around for students who can't find rides to Willimantic. I think we have enough stores already."

Peter Zammary agreed. "The mall doesn't sound like a definite plan, like ConnTech." Zammary said he felt that even if the complex was built, it would "only offer a few more jobs to UConn students, but that's it."

But some students like the idea of a new mall, like Mike Vonkannewurff. "I definitely think the theater should go. It isn't doing me any good."

Vonkannewurff said he felt the proposed mall would be good, for both the community and the students. "We could have a profitable commercial area here, like Eastbrook Mall. Students would have an easier time getting things they need without travelling a long way. Kannewurff added that good planning should prevent any traffic or parking problems.

Other students are undecided. "It depends on what stores get in" said Chris Tracy. "I think losing the theater will be difficult for those without transportation. They will have to rely on whatever movies are shown on campus."

The majority seemed to agree with Jill Zuccardy, who said "I don't think a mall is the answer. The project does not provide enough parking, and it will worsen traffic congestion."

Hillel joins conference

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at UConn has announced that it will participate in the first "New England Regional Conference on Soviet Jewry," a daylong conference which will be held in West Hartford, April 14. The Theme of the conference is "Soviet Jewry at the Crossroads: Preparing for Summit II and Beyond."

Among highlights of the program will be a historical overview of Soviet Jewry and the plight of Soviet Jews; a panel presentation on U.S.-Soviet relations and its impact on Soviet Jewry; a keynote address on "Israel, the Soviet Union and Soviet Jewry," and advocacy workshops on the community and campus role in a national mobilization.

Among sponsors of this conference is the National Conference on Soviet Jewry; the National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council, and the Community Relations Committee of the Greater Hartford Jewish Federation.

Students who wish to participate in this conference should call the Hillel office at 429-9007, by today. Transportation will be provided by Hillel. The program is to begin at 9:30 a.m. and continues through 3:30 p.m.

There will also be a "Bagel Brunch" at the Hillel House this Sunday, featuring an Israeli scholar who will speak on "The PLO, the Palestinians and the State of Israel." The brunch is to begin at 11:45 a.m.

Unique detention program teaches kids about drugs

STRATFORD (AP) - High school detention just ain't what it used to be. During sessions of alternative detention at Stratford High School, students play a game, along the way discussing alcohol, other drugs and driving.

A Pepsi can, one of the playing pieces on the makeshift game board came to rest on a space that read, "Your mother finds pot in your pocket. Go back three spaces." The students then discussed - with occasional giggles - their attitudes toward drugs.

To some, the attraction is the double credit they earn; to others, relief from boredom. But at least several high-school students see school nurse Annette Seirup's after-school detention class as a chance to learn about some of the most important issues they face as adolescents.

Some, who have done nothing wrong, have even chosen to sit through her detention rather than go home after school. "I wanted to hear what she had to say," said one student.

Another question in the board game put the students in the place of their parents, asking how they would introduce alcohol to their children. Other questions taught the students about organizations such as A1-A-Teen and Students Against Drunk Driving.

"There's nothing more pervasive and alarming than the rate of substance abuse," said Raymond M. O'Connell, Stratford High's principal who with Seirup hopes the 2-year-old, voluntary program will "pick up the slack" of education the teenagers are missing elsewhere.

Stratford High does not have a formal substance abuse program, he said.

Additionally, according to O'Connell, about half of the 1,100 students enrolled are from single-parent homes and another 40 percent come from homes where both parents work.

"That's 90 percent of the students who aren't receiving the parental attention they should, and that's 90 percent of our students who because their parents are busy have a lot of unsupervised time on their hands. The only way I'm convinced you can stop substance abuse is to tell the kids it's not in their best interest before they start."

At multi-lingual dinner

Food is universal language

By Jacqueline Gabbidon

Campus Correspondent

"Lam cai nay vui lam," said the Viet Nameese, "Bahu saras hatu. Manay bahu gamu" aid the Indian in Gujarati dialect, "It brawt West Indians together as a fambly" in English patois. All of these comments were reactions by students to the multi-lingual dinner in Shippee cafeteria last night.

The dinner, the brain child of Shippee Head Resident, Sharon Turk, was the first such dinner to be held in a large dormitory. The idea was for students to sit at designated tables according to the language that they spoke, either through learning in class or by dint of their heritage.

Turk, a graduate student, said that since Shippee students have been responsive to international dinners that she has had in her apartment, she thought that the same response might be generated for a multi-lingual dinner.

There were tables set up for French speakers, as well as Spanish, Italian, German and English patois (which is spoken in the West Indies). There was a Russian-Polish table and a Chinese table which seated the Japanese, Viet Nameese, Korean and Indian speaking diners.

Helen Toothaker, a non resident and Shippee's daytime telephone operator, said "il pranzo era delizioso" which means "the meal was delicious." The consensus at the Italian table where Helen sat as that the meal was a fabulous idea, because it afforded them the opportunity, which they don't often have, to speak Italian.

"Creo que esta cena internacional es una buena idea y que debe ser la primera de muchos," said Beth Phillips, expressing her view that this international dinner is a good idea and should be the first of many.

Phillips, a fourth semester Spanish major, said that despite the enthusiasm, it is hard to get everyone in a large dormitory involved in something like this, but it was on the whole quite successful.

Jackie VanBergen, a nursing major, also sitting at the Spanish table, said that the dinner was a good way to practice conversing in the language.

Eunsuk Chung, a freshman pharmacy major who was sitting at the Korean table said that other dorms should be invited to such events so as to broaden the scope of the concept. She suggested posting messages in the International Center to make other students aware.

At the English patois table, Jockline McKoy, a sixth semester accounting major, said it gave her a chance to speak with other girls from different West Indian islands.

Also present at the dinner was Eleanor Leyden, the director of the International Center here at UConn. She said that it was a good idea which could become a UConn tradition. She too suggested inviting more outsiders so as to get more people involved.

Athletes unite against hunger: SportAid

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Rock star Bob Geldof Thursday announced his African aid group will sponsor "Sportaid" next month, designed to be "the biggest mass sports participation in the history of the world."

Geldof, appeared at a news conference with James Grant, director of UNICEF, which will co-sponsor the effort to raise funds for African relief.

Geldof said runners in Ethiopia and the Sudan will start May 17 and other runners are expected to reach New York May 25 where they will light a torch at the United Nations May 25.

At that moment, "the world will begin running," the Irish musician said.

Races have been organized all over the world under the slogan "The Race Against Time," he said. Each runner will pay $10 for a T-shirt which will be the entry fee and the chief means of fund-raising.

Sportaid is also seeking corporate sponsors.

'New Music' draws crowd at Student Union

AND THE BAND PLAYED ON -- Skidrow Noise was one of the four bands that performed last night as part of WHUS's New Music series (Dan Dennehy photo).

Hundreds of students bopped the night away at the Student Union last night, as four local bands gave the crowds their best sounds.

World sociologists study terrorist psychology

ROME (AP)—A long-haired German construction worker. A sociology professor from Florence. A Belgian printer. A laid-off Yugoslav factory hand.

Each took "Der Sprung"—"The Leap"—as the Germans call it, going underground to plot, bomb and kill with the radical bands waging terror wars across Europe. Social scientists are trying to discover why.

"If we want to stop terrorism we must understand terrorists," says University of Rome psychiatrist Franco Ferracuti.

Ferracuti and other investigators, undertaking independent studies of the terrorist mind have found common traits: They frequently are loners, have lost parents while young, were failing professionally or educationally. They usually are middle-class, with above-average schooling. Guilt feelings often burden them.

Although frightened citizens may consider them deranged, "the studies have found conclusively that the large majority of terrorists are not psychotics," said Washington-based behavioral scientist Jerrold Post, who has studied terrorists for the U.S.

Law-enforcement officials agree.

"Their 'fanaticism' is extremely overrated," Raymond E. Kendall, chief of the Interpol police network, said in a Paris interview. "...They prepare their operations very carefully. If I were a professional criminal going to rob a bank, I would behave in the same way. It is a criminal approach."

The range of personalities and political causes makes generalizations difficult. But Post categorizes terrorists according to their feelings toward their parents.

"Anarchic ideologues," such as West Germany's Red Army Faction and Italy's Red Brigades, are disloyal to parents who are loyal to the existing system, Post says. "Nationalist separatists," such as the Palestinian guerrillas and Irish Republican Army, are loyal to families disloyal to the regime.

With the support of family and ethnic community, the nationalists are usually better "adjusted" and may operate relatively openly.

Ferracuti noted that the Palestinians, for example, have achievable, non-utopian goals, "and that makes it easy to recruit members."

But Western Europe's far-left terrorists "are trying to impose a utopian dream on a world saying, 'Leave us alone,'" and therefore must lead clandestine lives, the 58-year-old psychiatrist said.

Ferracuti, who has written widely cited studies of Red Brigades members, Puerto Rican separatists and other radicals, traces the European terrorist movement of the student upheavals of the late 1960s, when university graduates could not find jobs and the Vietnam War was radicalizing Western youth.

Post believes that terrorists justify personal failures by blaming the system—"The idea that 'It is not us, it's them.'" In a sense, the terrorist group is the first real family they have found, he said.

Many other terrorists feel they are on the defensive against a powerful aggressor state, the specialists say. Ferracuti describes it as a "fantasy war." the terrorists' terminology reflects it—they are "armies" and "brigades" that engage in "military operations" and demand "prisoner of war" status when captured.

"These people lose their sense of reality," said Hans-Werner Kuehn, a top West German anti-terrorist police official. "In their writings, they see themselves as if they could fight and defeat the 'imperialist' system—a blatant misjudgment of their own capabilities."

Jazz and sacred music congenial at VDM

By Susan Donoghue
Daily Campus Staff

On Sunday, April 6, Peter Bagley and the concert choir put on one of the most well-attended von der Mehden concerts of the season. The choir performed Pange Lingua variations by Dave Brubeck, the well-known contemporary and jazz composer, and Psallite, Psallite, Songs of Praise, by our own Dr. James Eversole, assistant head of the Music Department and composition professor at UConn.

The first meeting between Dave Brubeck and the concert choir took place last year in Wilton when the group was on tour. Mr. Brubeck was pleased with the choir and asked Dr. Bagley if they would be interested in doing one of his pieces. The rest is... well, you know the phrase.

The instrumentation for the piece was chorus, piano, and chimes. Throughout the piece there were several well-executed sections where the men sang a unison chant, meandering around a central tone. The focused, pure sound led me to feel we were walking on sacred grounds. The ladies had their moments, too, particularly when they were singing in perfect, hollow fifths. The fifth can have such a worshipful, clean quality about it.

The second section arrived with joyful words and music of praise, aided by Stephen Fields's piano accompaniment. The overall feeling became reflective and almost completely still during, "Sacramentum, Sacramentum". The third movement began, quietly reverent. Dave Puzzo was the man behind the tall chimes, which resembled organ pipes, especially considering the setting. Each light caress on the chime brought the monestary aura even closer, and gave a meditative quality to the prayers uttered by voices and piano.

The simplicity of the piece, in its clarity of harmonies and use of instruments, was its beauty. Applause escalated as Mr. Brubeck walked down the aisle to shake the conductor's hand, and then motioned for his wife to come on down.

And next for something completely different—a jazz quartet came out to play some short Brubeck selections. The group began with "In Your Own Sweet Way" and Jeff Taylor's sax tenderly emoted in his own sweet way. "Broadway Romance" was a gentle ballad. The beat stepped in the middle but the mood was still mellow, and pianist Ron Drotos gave us a comfortable, laid back solo.

As soon as Morris Pleasure, bass, and Tim Keane, drums, started to rattle off "Back Bay Blues", I caught some movement out of the corner of my eye. It was Brubeck, bouncing his head in rhythmic approval. The last piece, "It's a Raggy Waltz", was punchy. Brubeck smiled as he stood up and applauded the group—perhaps they brought back some nice memories.

At intermission I asked Brubeck how he liked the Pange Linga variations. "It was great. It was great! I really liked the way those chimes turned out... (I) think I'll keep that in there".

After the intermission the University Wind Ensemble took their seats between the two tiers of choir risers and Dr. Eversole's Psallite, Psallite, Songs of Praise began. In his program notes Eversole told us we'd be hearing three psalms from the Old Testament. The first of these, Psalm 24, was slow and dark. Mostly the winds blended well with the voices, but there were times when they covered them up.

Psalm 47, however, compensated with a pretty good balance between the two groups in an energetic "out burst of sheer joy" as Eversole noted. There were bold trumpets heralding "listen!", and human voices raised in joy, "Psallite!". Drums and mighty, low brass kept a strong pulse. The whole movement, down to the last "Amen", depicted some grandiose, ensuing glory. A long pause gave way to a beautiful baritone horn solo that blossomed into an introduction to the third movement by the wind ensemble. Such power in the words of the words of Psalm 90: "From everlasting ... to everlasting/You are God" was enhanced by the music inside them. The piece ended quietly on a reverent "Amen".

From Eversole's program notes: "The problem in working with such magnificent words is not whether they can be set, but whether or not they can be set well enough to let their power show through effectively and aesthetically". I saw it. Later I asked Dr. Eversole about the performance of his piece. He said that it is almost always hard to get the group to understand the whole concept of the piece, but "...with Peter Bagley I never have that problem". Apparently Mr. Brubeck agrees, because at the reception, following the concert, at the Faculty-Alumni Center, He said he looked forward to working more with the choir.

Revolution=freedom

Revolution is the ultimate definition of freedom.

If a government does not represent the citizens of its country it has no right to govern.

As Americans, we define ourselves by our freedom: political, economic, and social. Our fears of communist takeover are in direct response to our love of freedom. How can we know that we will be guaranteed freedom as one sparsely populated country on a planet where freedom is repressed and members of the same species oppress each other?

Fascism is the admitted doctrine of a government oriented in policies of racism. The ability to declare one aspect of the race as inherently superior to another is a dangerous power. Allowed to propagate it will destroy the beautiful heterogeneous conglomeration that is mankind.

The state of revolution in South Africa has reached disastrous proportions and the political coup in that country is imminent. The black majority will take control of its own country and its "inalienable" human rights with or without American aid.

We can expedite or hinder that process. The choice is ours.

The rage in the citizens of black South Africans has been repressed long enough to be manifested in organized protests, violent and otherwise.

If we continue to give our tacit consent to the fascist regime governing South Africa we cannot help but be counted as the oppressive enemy when the oppressed revolutionaries realize their freedom.

Nelson Mandella's wife, spokesperson and political motivator for the South African majority, has already refused economic aid which the Reagan administration offered to help rebuild a destroyed South African hospital. She, however, accepts private contributions.

The polarization of friends and enemies, oppressed and oppressor is crystallizing. Saying that we do not care does not excuse us from our responsibilities.

Divestment is a small step, but one which the African National Congress has asked us to take the Board of Trustees will decide today if they should pursue a stock portfolio free of corporations which support the current South African regime. As students, the majority on this campus, we can help them make the morally and economically correct decision.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

The University's new vice president for health affairs said Monday he views the position as head of UConn's health schools and programs as "an exciting opportunity," and said he is looking forward to beginning his new job July 1.

John A. DiBiaggio, who is currently dean of the School of Dentistry at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, was named UConn vice president for health affairs and executive director of the Health Center by the Board of Trustees at their Friday meeting. In a telephone interview with the Daily Campus conducted from his Virginia home, DiBiaggio said he is pleased with the appointment to the UConn post.

5 YEARS AGO TODAY

A group calling itself the "Committee to Save the Bookstore" is expected to distribute a memo today to all University faculty and staff urging them to join the Co-op by paying a $5 fee so they will be able to vote in elections today and Thursday against the Committee for Co-op Reform candidates, a slate running against the Co-op Board of Directors nominees.

Kadafi made to be shot

The late Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago used to say that after he lost an election early in his career, his mother boosted his gloomy spirits with these words: "The good Lord never closes one window without opening another."

And how true that was. After failing to be elected sheriff, Daley kept plugging along and eventually became mayor and a legend in his own time.

Now we see another example of how dramatically fortunes can be reversed, how after one window closes, another suddenly opens.

Only last week, President Reagan found himself frustrated and angry.

He had wanted to give $100 million to the Nicaraguan contras so they could revive their sagging war with the Sandinistas.

Despite the President's pleas, Congress turned him down. For the time being at least, the contras will hang out in the jungle and wait to see what the fierce Patrick Buchanan can think of next. So, President Reagan found that the window had slammed shut on one of his most cherished goals—getting the action perking again Nicaragua.

But that was last week. And in only a few days, a new window has opened for President Reagan.

Not in Nicaragua, but it's almost as good. We're getting to blow up some Libyans.

Just when our spirits were sagging—at least the spirits in the White House—the daffy Muammar Kaddafi came through and opened a new window.

As he had promised to do, Kaddafi took a shot at some of our planes when they crossed the border Kaddafi has imposed in the Gulf of Sidra, off his coast.

And just as we had promised, we didn't take Kaddafi's guff. Several of Libya's patrol boats and an undetermined number of Libyan sailors are now sleeping with the Mediterranean fishes.

We also zapped the land-base that had aimed missiles at our planes.

We're not at war, of course. As Larry Speakes cautioned reporters, this is only a confrontation. But based on the early confrontation casualty lists, we are winning hands down.

Not that we could expect anything less than victory. If we couldn't win a mere confrontation with a little country like Libya, what kind of world power would we be? Even Kaddafi must have known that when he sent dinky patrol boats out to challenge our huge fleet. But being something of a nut, Kaddafi doesn't seem to care.

The best thing about this confrontation is that nobody can accuse us of starting it.

We were just minding our own business, conducting military exercises in the Mediterranean, which is our right.

True, Kaddafi had said that if we came within 150 miles of his shoreline, he'd shoot. And everybody knows that he's demented enough to do exactly that.

But as Larry Speakes said, our purpose in sending a fleet of 23 ships and 250 aircraft into Kaddafi's little corner of the world was "not to evoke a response or humiliate Kaddafi."

Of course not. We did it because it is our "right of navigation" to be beyond the 12-mile limit, in international waters.

I'm sure that some chronic nit-pickers are going to point out that the majority of the earth's surface is covered with water. And that it's probably true that we could have just as effectively held the military exercises 160 miles away from Libya. Or ever 450 miles away.

But that isn't the point. There comes a time when Ronald Reagan has to draw the line. And this week just happens to be the time. Especially after his contra frustrations.

We can look at this sudden confrontation this way: Under American law, if not international law, it is beyond President Reagan's authority to blow up those irritating members of Congress who vote against aid for the contras.

But it is fully within his authority to blow up some Libyans when their daffy leader again demonstrates to the world that he's not playing with a full deck.

So I would remind any of the critics of this triumphant confrontation to keep this thought in mind.

The Lord wouldn't have made people like Kaddafi if he didn't want us to shoot at him.

Homework for DC

In response to Paul Parker's "Vote No for USG fee" column we feel it is our responsibility to present some of the facts that were left out. Mr. Parker claims USG could save either $10,000 or $14,000 by firing the USG secretary. In actuality the secretary's salary is closer to $9,500. Mr. Parker states that with this money four students could be hired to do the same job. From past experience one should quite obviously realize that pushing your way through the State of Connecticut's beaucroatic red tape requires the assistance of a competent, full-time secretary who has the experience to assist students in this complicated and lengthy process in order to be funded.

In regards to an increase in area funding, we agree with Mr. Parker. But by firing Al Driscoll and the USG secretary it will only serve to eliminate the current deficit USG is facing because of the fee increase they did not receive. The firing of the two employees would save close to $30,000. Under the proposed 87-88 USG budget, $50,000 would be allocated to area councils and clubs not to mention the cost of replacements for the above mentioned positions. Seems your calculator needs some new batteries, Paul!

Furthermore, Parker's slanderous statements of Steve Protter were uncalled for. We are appalled at the irresponsible journalism displayed by the DC. Steve Protter is perhaps the hardest working and most devoted assembly member. His list of accomplishments is impressive such as : Editor of the USG newsletter (the first constituent outreach project), sponsor of the spring concert legislation, founding member of the Jungle food committee and co-author of the USG fee increase bill. We wish all USG members had such a list. His goals are in tune with USG needs such as a professional staff for the USG newsletter, greater utilization of the USG staff, balancing of the fall USG budget and a new fee increase proposal that will finally give USG the funds that Mr. Parker so vehemently opposes. We do not appreciate this type of unprofessional writing and in the future we would hope YOU, Mr. Parker do your homework as well as Steve Protter does!

Dress for Success

Editor's note: This is an attempt to encourage men students to better their appearance and dress habits on campus. It was written by one of our female feature writers, to offer the woman's point of view.

Fashion? What's that? You may not have heard any students express their feelings on the subject in those exact words, but a quick tour of campus would make you think that they should ensue from many mouths after such an inquiry.

Male students on this campus seem to dress mainly for convenience. It may be easier to get up in the morning and throw on an old shirt and a pair of khakies for your 8:00 class, and who has time to shave, you may say, but have you ever thought of the appearance you present to others?

The business world stresses neatness and partially judges character by it. Of course it is all right to be comfortable, but this can be accomplished along with a neat appearance.

"Just what do you consider proper dress?" you may ask. Here is what a cross section of co-eds on campus think about it. The "ideal" man wears clean, pressed khakies, a v-necked sweater, and please, boys, with a shirt under it, or maybe, on occasions, a suitcoat. The latter, along with a shirt and tie would be greatly appreciated for evening wear in the Student Union, by the way. Our "hero" also has his hair combed, or at least resorts to that well known alternative of getting a "butch" haircut, so that it won't show! To go on, he takes time to shave in the morning. Nothing looks worse than a two day beard. You never have time? Then why not try setting your "big ben alarm" five minutes earlier for a change?

You may think that these are rather strong words and that girls have no right to intrude into the men's world of mannerisms and habits. Think a minute. It is our school too you know. Did it ever occur to you that your dress may have something to do with the higher opinions that many Connecticut residents reserve for the so called "Ivy League" schools?

How about it, boys? Why not try to start this year off right. The freshmen boys are going to follow your example so make it a good one. It doesn't require a new wardrobe, you know, just a little thought and effort!

This was reprinted from the Sept. 19, 1955 edition of The Connecticut Daily Campus.

Pols should be ashamed

The legislators who rejected divestment of state pension money in South Africa should be ashamed of themselves. I am compelled to ask how they do such a thing. Has the government in this state arrived at a point that money will dictate their consciences?! Keeping any money invested in South Africa is nothing less than a stamp of approval for the insanity of apartheid. If, indeed, Connecticut wishes to keep so much as one dime invested there, they are recognizing apartheid as an acceptable form of government.

There are many who would argue that a policy of "constructive engagement" is acceptable; in other words, we will only hurt black people by pulling our money out. This is nothing less than a lie constructed by those who refuse to act out of their consciences. By keeping our dollars in the hands of white South Africans, we are helping them to oppress the blacks there. Organizations which choose to keep their money flowing to the white regime should consider themselves accomplices to the crime; they have chosen to pay whites for oppressing blacks. By keeping pension money invested in South Africa, the state of Connecticut has made an ugly and repulsive statement.

For those who argue that the state would lose too much money by divesting, I offer two responses. The first and primary argument is that we have a moral obligation to make a statement condemning apartheid. Even though this country was incepted on the premise of equality, our true colors seem to show when dealing with blacks. I think it is fair to ask if this state really believes in equality for all; if we do, then why do we pay for a system that overtly shuns this idea? Certainly, when we are so obsessed with green paper that it forms our ethics, we have a problem.

My second case against investing is this: many states have already proven that money lost by divestiture does not create serious problems. In New Jersey, for example, Governor Thomas Keane made possible the divestiture of the pension funds of his state. Basically, he argued that losing money is not an excuse for not doing what is right. As for Connecticut, I feel that any legislator who argues that too much money will be lost through divestiture is either lying or misinformed. To think that Connecticut, with a growing state surplus and the third highest per capita income, cannot cope with the amount of money lost through divestiture is absurd.

While divestiture alone will not end apartheid in South Africa, there is hardly a doubt that investing will keep apartheid going. When are we going to figure out that no amount of money should keep us from doing what is morally right? On this issue there is simply no compromise. Either we keep our money in South Africa, thereby voicing our support for apartheid, or we take out money completely out, and voice our rejection of this barbarism.

Writing this letter two days before the UConn Board of Trustees votes on divestiture, it is my hope that our school has the vision to rise above the ugliness shown by the state legislature. Being an institution of higher learning, we should follow the leads of our New England counterparts and divest all of our holdings in companies doing business in South Africa. In other words, UConn, this is our chance to prove that we have a conscience; let's not blow it.

Gamba gang to play

The Storrs Collegium Musicum, directed by Dr. Bruce Bellingham, will present a special concert at St. Joseph's Church, at Jackson and Valley streets, at 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, April 20th.

The program to be presented is called "German Renaissance and Baroque Canzonas, Sonatas, Concertos, and Arias", and will show off the newly aquired instuments that make up the baroque orchestra at UConn. The violins, violas, violincellos, viole da gamba, and violone all are either original instruments from the 17th and 18th centuries, or modern copies using gut strings and priod bows which restore the brilliance to the music of Muffat, Biber, and Handel.

The Renaissance portion will include recorders, krumhorns, dulcians, and viols in music from the ages of Henry 5th and Elizabeth 1st of England.

One dance suite for the entire group of twelve performers was written by Johann Hermann Schein, whose 400th birthday is being observed this year.

The baroque music portion of the concert shows the assimilation by German composers of French and Italian styles, culminating the international style of Georg Frideric Handel. The German composer of Italian operas for English audiences.

The last visit of the Storrs Collegium Musicum attracted a large audience to St. Joseph's to hear music performed on the instruments on which it was written. The sounds are sure to be delightful in the fine, resonant acoustics of St. Joseph's church.

Red Sox win first; Yankees triumph on squeeze in 10th

Red Sox 4, Tigers 2

DETROIT (AP)--Doubles by Ed Romero and Bill Buckner and Jim Rice's two-run single keyed a four-run fifth inning and Al Nipper checked Detroit on four hits Thursday as the Boston Red Sox beat the Tigers 4-2.

Nipper struck out six and walked five in 8 2-3 innings and Joe Sambito got the final out to salvage the final game of Boston's season-opening three-game series.

It was Sambito's first save since April, 1982.

The Tigers got an unearned run in the second inning when Darrell Evans walked, reached third and scored when Buckner dropped Doug Baker's grounder at first base.

In Detroit's seventh, singles by Darnell Coles and Chet Lemon and a walk by pinch-hitter Harry Spillman loaded the bases and Dave Collins' grounder sent Coles home.

Yankees 6, Royals 5

NEW YORK (AP)--Pinch-hitter Dale Berra's bases-loaded suicide squeeze bunt single with one out in the 10th inning scored Mike Easler as the New York Yankees rallied from an early five-run deficit and defeated the Kansas City Royals 6-5 Thursday.

Easler led off the tenth against rookie reliever Al Hargeshimer with a double to the base of the center-field wall. Easler went to third on a grounder and Mike Pagliarulo and Butch Wynegar were walked intentionally to load the bases.

The winner was Dave Righetti, who came in after Frank White had led off the top of the 10th off Rod Scurry with a double.

The Yankees sent it into extra innings with a ninth-inning run as pinch-hitter Ron Hassey singled with one out, Willie Randolph walked with two away and Don Mattingly singled to center.

A's 3, Twins 0

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)--Moose Haas pitched six-hit, shutout ball for 7 2-3 innings and rookie Jose Canseco hit a two-run homer to lead the Oakland A's past the Minnesota Twins 3-0 Thursday.

The A's, winning their first game of the season, scratched out their first run with the help of Dave Kingman's bunt single in the fourth inning. Canseco's homer in the seventh was the team's first of the year.

Haas, acquired from Milwaukee, walked one batter and struck out five in his first game with the A's. He left after Kent Hrbek doubled in the eighth and Jay Howell saved his win.

The A's had four hits through six innings off John Butcher. But Carney Lansford doubled to open the seventh and Canseco, who hit five homers last year in an impressive September with the A's, followed with his homer over the center-field fence.

Jays 11, Rangers 10

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Willie Upshaw and George Bell hit consecutive two-out home runs in the eighth inning

Thursday night to lift the Toronto Blue Jays to a wild 11-10 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Texas reliever Greg Harris, 0-1, was the victim of the rally, which began when Garth Iorg singled with two out. Upshaw then homered to tie the game and Bell hit the game-winner over the wall at the 380-foot mark in left field.

Tom Henke, 1-0, pitched the last two innings for Toronto and the official scorer credited him with the victory rather than a save.

Cards 4, Cubs 2

ST LOUIS (AP)--Ozzie Smith singled home two runs to break a fourth-inning tie and Rick Ownbey earned his first major league win in almost three years, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-2 victory Thursday over the Chicago Cubs.

Ownbey struck out two and walked four before leaving the game two batters into the seventh inning. Todd Worrell saved Ownbey's first victory in a St. Louis uniform.

New Britain opens season tonight

By Mark Sudol
Campus Correspondent

NEW BRITAIN--Even though the weather was a bit gloomy Thursday afternoon and there was a severe chill in the air, the season was, astonishingly enough, about to begin. Opening day, that is, for the New Britain Red Sox.

The Red Sox open their season tonight against the Nashua Pirates at Willowbrook Park.

New Britain, the class AA farm team for the Boston Red Sox, is eager to play ball coming off a fine 1985 season that saw them lose a tough series to Vermont three games to one in the League Championship.

The Britsox are managed by Tony Torchia, who was a coach with Boston last year. He previously managed the Red Sox' Eastern League entry from 1978-82, when they played in Bristol.

His team's chances are "relative to the caliber of the remaining seven teams (in the Eastern League)," Torchia said. "We've got some good looking players who we feel can play for the (major league) Red Sox some day. Our team is a team that can run well, pitch well and play good defense."

"The Pirates always have a lot of speed," Torchia said of Nashua, "and they have some good arms on their pitching staff. We'll see how good they are tomorrow night."

One of New Britain's top prospects is first baseman Sam Horn. Horn was given a chance to stick with the parent club, but due to a bad spring wound up back in New Britain, a move which should please the fans but not Horn.

"This spring training was one that was very difficult for me," Horn said. "However, I think I'll do real well because I'm going to put my heart into the game."

Maybe if all the Britsox put their hearts into the game, they could go that extra step and become champions.

Softball active in tourney

After completing a crucial sweep of Adelphi, which had been tied with UConn for second in the Northeast rankings, the softball team takes a six-game winning streak into this weekend's Penn State Lady Lion Invitational Tournament.

The Huskies will play Virginia, Adelphi and Ohio State tomorrow. On Saturday, the four top teams will play in the double-elimination championship round. The other four go to consolation play.

On Sunday, UConn will play Penn State in a doubleheader.

"It's a tough tournament," UConn head coach Karen Mullins said, "but we're ready to play ball."

Every game is important to the Huskies, Mullins said, because the team which finishes first in the Northeast will probably get an NCAA Tournament bid. UMass is currently ranked first.

Mullins said that the way the Huskies are playing, they can overtake UMass.

"We've got something good going and we want to continue it," she said.

Whalers in command

QUEBEC (AP)—Paul MacDermid scored two goals and Mike Liut turned in his second consecutive strong performance in goal to lead the Hartford Whalers to a 4-1 victory over the Quebec Nordiques in the NHL playoffs Thursday night.

Stewart Gavin and Torrie Robertson also scored for the underdog Whalers, who took a commanding 2-0 lead in their best-of-five Adams Division semifinal which resumes Saturday night in Hartford.

MacDermid, who had only 13 goals this season, scored what proved to be the winner at 8:51 of the first period. The right wing added an insurance goal against Quebec netminder Clint Malarchuk at 8:22 of the second.

Liut, who faced 27 shots in the game, made his biggest stops on Pat Price and Dale Hunter midway through the period, before Robertson tallied to put the game out of reach.

The men's tennis team dropped a 6-3 decision to Fairfield yesterday (Mark Caswell photo).

Daily Campus Staff

The men's tennis team lost to Fairfield University yesterday 6-3 in bone-chilling temperatures. The contest was tied at three after the singles matches, but Fairfield exploited one of the Huskies weaknesses, doubles, and swept all three matches.

In the No. 1 singles position, Eric Uthgenannt lost to Fairfield's Rome Lilicraft (6-4, 6-2). Uthgenannt replaced Steve Ehrenpreis who was unable to play. UConn winners were Todd Farin (6-3, 6-1), Mark Sinatro (6-1, 6-3) and Mike Hardesty who had to go to three sets (3-6, 6-2, 6-2).

to beat Don Swoboda. Farin remains the only undefeated team member with a 4-0 record.

With the match tied, the pressure was on the doubles teams. With the team of Uthgenannt and Farin losing early (6-4, 6-3), even more pressure was added to the remaining matches. Jeff Even and Matt Arciero were beaten (3-6, 6-2, 6-4) and Sinatro and Hardesty lost (6-3, 7-6).

UConn coach Ben Kirtland had said that the doubles teams' practice time had been limited by rain which has cancelled some practices.

The loss drops the Huskies' record to 1-2.

UConn returns to action Saturday when they travel to Springfield for a 1 p.m. match.

Baseball team tops Fairfield, 6-2

FAIRFIELD--The UConn baseball team rapped out 12 hits and Bob Emery and Stew Strong combined on a six-hitter to lead the Huskies to a 6-2 win over Fairfield University Thursday afternoon.

UConn, now 7-14, scored all the runs it would need in the fourth inning. The Huskies began the inning with five straight hits, including an RBI double by H.A. Butterworth and an RBI single by Jerry La Penta. Al Franceshini and Peter Zippel rounded out the scoring with sacrifice flies.

UConn added insurance runs in the sixth, on an RBI single by Keith Kockenmeister and in the ninth, on LaPenta's eighth home run of the year.

The Stags, now 5-12, scored single runs in the fourth and sixth.

Emery, 1-1, picked up the win working 6 2-3 innings.

He allowed both Fairfield runs on a total of six hits, while striking out five.

Strong ended the game by pitching 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief.

Jose Perez, 2-4, took the loss in a complete-game performance. He allowed 12 hits, and had no walks or strikeouts.

The Huskies return to action Saturday when they travel to Boston College for a Big East Conference doubleheader at noon. On Sunday, they play a single game at BC at noon.

The Boston College is especially important, because the Huskies are in a fight with Boston College and Providence for the final playoff spot in the Big East's Northern Division behind first-place St. John's.

St. John's is 6-0 in the conference, followed by UConn at 2-3, Boston College at 2-4 and Providence at 1-4.

Including this weekend's series, the Huskies have six games remaining with Boston College, and three each with Providence and St. John's.
